

Sarah, Ethan & Noah's Story

Recently the kindergarten held a tea in honor of Mother's Day. It was a special event that I got to spend with my triplets, Sarah, Ethan and Noah. This was an emotional year for me as my little fragile babies turned 6 and graduated kindergarten all at the same time.

I have had this picture of them in the NICU on the fridge for a long time now. This the first time I was allowed to hold all 3 of them together and my first experience of life as a triplet mom. It is a very special picture for me. From left to right is Ethan, Sarah and then Noah. They are 3 weeks old and in week 3 out of 5 in the NICU, born at 29 weeks gestation.

On Tuesday the kindergarten teacher sent home the picture of the triplets and I from the tea. I happened to look at the tea picture as I was standing beside the fridge and realized how amazing it was to see the picture from the NICU and then to see their picture at the tea. In the tea picture the triplets are, from left to right, Ethan, Sarah and Noah, the same as they are in the NICU picture. It is an amazing site for me to see both pictures together like that. If only someone could have told me back in the NICU picture what I know in the Kindergarten picture!
